

Improving cancer care for employees and their families

The Cancer Support Program encourages adherence to evidence-based treatments and appropriate care. As a result, it helps mitigate the costs associated with cancer treatment and increase the quality of care for employees.

Support from a personal cancer nurse

The program's nurses provide a single point of contact for employees to help them make informed decisions about their care. The nurses are supported by an entire team of cancer experts to help deliver specialized case management to the employee.

- Educate employees regarding hospice services and palliative care, as appropriate
- Educate survivors on prevention of future cancers and encourage behaviors via the toll-free Survivorship Hotline, online resources and community programs
- Help employees navigate the health care system and refer them to specialists
- Provide end-of-life care transition or support for survivors, including social worker support and advance directives

Helping to close gaps in care

We identify potential program participants early to help improve impact on treatment decisions. Dedicated nurses then build relationships with employees and their families, helping them focus on their health while continuing to go about their daily routines.

Additionally, the cancer nurses:

- Provide education and support and collaborate with providers to help employees manage symptoms and side effects, leading to fewer inpatient admissions and emergency room visits
- Help manage pharmacy costs by comparing medications to evidence-based standards and monitor employee usage to verify adherence
- Provide support to help employees make informed decisions about their treatment

Increasing quality of care

The program may help employers:

- Control overall increases in medical expenses
- Control ongoing costs due to early outreach to employees that may help impact treatment decisions
- Reduce absenteeism so employees can continue to work and remain productive

Additional services offered by the program include:

- Access to social workers for financial, transportation, child care and other concerns
- Support at end of life and impact on using hospice
- Survivorship services
